

Other Module Patterns

- Designers in a particular domain often publish “standard” module decompositions for systems in that domain.
- These standard decompositions, if put in the “context, problem, solution” form, constitute module decomposition patterns.
- Similarly in the object-oriented realm, “standard” or published class/object design solutions for a class of system constitute object-oriented patterns.